

Queensland Government
Treaty Statement of Commitment _____ and _____ response to recommendations of the Eminent Panel

August 2020

The journey so far

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples have long called for acknowledgement of the injustices they have suffered, self-determination and a significant change in the relationship with the Queensland Government.

In July 2019, the Queensland Government launched Tracks to Treaty – Reframing the relationship with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Queenslanders and signed a Statement of Commitment to give effect to this reframed relationship.

Path to Treaty is a very important way to come together and negotiate a new way of working in partnership for the Queensland Government and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples—one that is underpinned by self-determination and actioned through truth telling, empowerment and agreement making.

It also builds on a number of Queensland-led initiatives that are advancing reconciliation by fostering a shared pride in culture, healing the wounds of the past, and setting the foundation for a new and just relationship. These include the:

- addition to the preamble to the Queensland Constitution to honour Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as the First Australians in 2010
- launch of the Queensland Government Reconciliation Action Plan 2018–2021
- establishment of Local Thriving Communities initiative to support local decision making in remote communities and build on their strengths to implement ideas on how best to achieve the aspirations and vision for their local community
- commencement of the Queensland Human Rights Act 2019 which in its preamble acknowledges the right to self-determination of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, and creates obligations on public entities to protect and promote the human rights set out in the Act, including the distinct cultural rights of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples
- commitment to the legal recognition of traditional Torres Strait Islander child rearing practices
- implementation of Our Way: A generational strategy for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander children and families, 2017–2037
- establishment of the Queensland First Children and Families Board
- appointment of the First Nations Advisor for Housing
- adoption of the Domestic and Family Violence Prevention Strategy and development of Queensland’s Framework for Action – Reshaping our Approach to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Domestic and Family Violence
- appointment of the first Chief Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Officer and Deputy Director-General of the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Health Division
- commencement of the Health and other Legislation Amendment Act 2019 which aims to strengthen the commitment to health equity for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples
- development of a Queensland Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Healing Strategy to address the impact of intergenerational trauma, grief and loss, violence and abuse
- ongoing commitment to increase representation of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples on government boards and committees.

Starting the Path to Treaty conversation

We will continue to celebrate First Nations cultures, languages, histories, lore, and spiritualities that have thrived for more than 65,000 years. We will also take the opportunity to tell the truth and begin to heal together.

Consultation on the Path to Treaty provided the opportunity for Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and non-Indigenous Queenslanders to come together and start a journey towards a future that is more just, more equal and more respectful.

An Eminent Panel of high profile Aboriginal, Torres Strait Islander and non-Indigenous Queenslanders, supported by a Treaty Working Group, was appointed to guide genuine, respectful, and meaningful conversations between all Queenslanders about what a treaty might mean to them and how we can co-exist into the future on the land we now share.

The views and voices of Queenslanders, particularly those of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples, were heard and more than 1700 people had their say through consultations held from October to December 2019. This included 24 face-to-face community sessions from Thursday Island in the north to the Gold Coast in the south, 331 online surveys and 38 written submissions.

What we heard

Strong support for a treaty process from First Nations and non-Indigenous Queenslanders alike that is unique to Queensland, engages all people and is based on truth.

Path to Treaty conversations with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples and non-Indigenous people expressed significant support for a treaty-making process, with truth-telling and honesty about our shared history to be at the heart of the treaty process. Participants said that treaty-making would be a significant and long overdue milestone for Queensland.

Queenslanders also identified a number of other important key issues, including the need for:

- acknowledgement of First Nations' sovereignty
- a framework for truth-telling and addressing past wrongs
- negotiating treaties that have meaningful effect on the lives of First Nations peoples
- engaging young people in the treaty process
- capacity building to enable Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples to participate in the treaty making process
- representative mechanisms and governance for the treaty process.

This sentiment reflects similar discussions with First Nations peoples across Australia on the importance of truth-telling and the need for honest, genuine and respectful conversations. These views are what ultimately led to the Uluru Statement from the Heart, and marked the nation as ready to meaningfully understand each other and move forward towards reconciliation.

In February 2020, the Path to Treaty Eminent Panel officially presented its recommendations, supported by the findings of the Treaty Working Group report, to the Queensland Government for consideration. Based on community sentiment and extensive support for agreement making with First Nations Queenslanders, the Eminent Panel outlined its principal recommendation to advance a treaty process in Queensland.

Treaty enriches the lives of all Queenslanders

Treaties have been used throughout the world as accepted means for acknowledging past injustices, resolving differences, and creating a shared future.

The Path to Treaty enriches the lives of all Queenslanders and provides for greater recognition, celebration and learning from First Nations peoples.

It represents a significant step forward in reframing the relationship with First Nations peoples—one where all Queenslanders recognise Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples as the first peoples of this land we now share. It also provides a unique opportunity to come together and learn about our state's shared history, and respectfully acknowledge the harm caused by past injustices.

Understanding and accepting our shared history will be fundamental to healing and addressing the ongoing disparity that Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples continue to experience, and achieving justice, equality and access to opportunity for First Nations peoples.

Our commitment to a Path to Treaty

Now is the time to continue the Path to Treaty with the ultimate aim of treaty making with First Nations peoples.

As we face the challenges of 2020, the Queensland Government remains committed to reframing the relationship with First Nations peoples. The Queensland Government accepts or accepts in principle the Eminent Panel recommendations and is committed to:

- a treaty-making process with First Nations peoples in Queensland
- exploring options to establish an independent body through legislation to lead the Path to Treaty process including a truth-telling and healing process and supporting First Nations peoples to engage in the treaty making process, as recommended by the Eminent Panel.

In advancing the Path to Treaty process, the Queensland Government will seek to engage with all Queenslanders to:

- increase understanding of the need for sharing of truth and importance of historical acceptance in the reconciliation journey
- raise awareness about Queensland's shared history and the diversity of perspectives.

Mutual understanding, respect and recognition will be the cornerstone to any form of agreement making with First Nations Queenslanders.

Aspirations for a Path to Treaty in Queensland will progress in parallel to the national Indigenous voice to government process and embody the Uluru Statement from the Heart themes of Voice, Treaty and Truth.

The appointment of a Treaty Advancement Committee will provide the Queensland Government with expert advice and guidance on options for implementation of Path to Treaty recommendations. The Committee will also seek to maintain momentum for Path to Treaty discussions across Queensland, including overseeing community and stakeholder engagement, research initiatives and seek partnerships opportunities.

Following this engagement process and the work of the Treaty Advancement Committee, the Queensland Government will consider options in 2021 to establish an independent legislated body to lead the Path to Treaty, as recommended by the Eminent Panel.

The Queensland Government's response to all recommendations from the Eminent Panel is detailed in the following pages.

3. Truth Telling and Healing

Recommendations:

- 3.1 That the Queensland Government facilitate and resource a comprehensive process of Truth Telling to chronicle the history of First Nations Peoples prior to British colonisation of Queensland, the history and impact of colonisation on First Nations Peoples and the more recent history of Queensland in relation to First Nations Peoples.
- 3.2 That, as its first priority, the First Nations Treaty Institute be commissioned and empowered (e.g. the ability to compel the production of documents and witnesses) to conduct the process of Truth Telling and to support participants and witnesses involved in the process.
- 3.3 That healing and reconciliation be supported through the process with relevant service providers auspiced to provide support to First Nations People to recover from their lived experience and impacts of intergenerational trauma.
- 3.4 That the resources, materials and testimony gained from the process be used:
 - 3.4.1 To inform popular and academic understanding of First Nations and the history of colonisation and;
 - 3.4.2 As source material for the development of mandatory educational curricula.

3.1 – 3.3: Accepted in-principle

The Queensland Government acknowledges the need for a process of truth telling on the history of First Nations peoples in Queensland, including the impact of colonisation and dispossession.

The Queensland Government will support in good faith any future truth telling and healing process and will further consider options on how best to efficiently deliver the range of outcomes sought through the truth and healing process, informed by the advice of the Committee. This advice will also be informed by the implementation of the Queensland Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Healing Strategy.

3.4.1: Accepted in-principle

It is anticipated that material developed through a truth telling process would be retained as source material for State museums and libraries.

3.4.2: Accepted in-principle

It is anticipated that the Queensland Government would support Queensland schools to access and use resources generated through a truth telling process as source material to support teaching Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander histories and cultures.

It is anticipated that the Department of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Partnerships (DATSIP) and the Department of Education (DoE) would work with Queensland Curriculum and Assessment Authority to update the Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Perspective Statement 2017–2020 and explore options for truth telling resources, material and testimony to be made available to Queensland schools.

It is anticipated that DATSIP and DoE would advocate for the truth telling process to be incorporated into the Australian Curriculum.
